Graduate Programs in History

The Department of History at CSU chooses a select group of students each year for its Master of Arts program in History and in Public History. Earning an M.A. in History at CSU is a step toward any number of exciting future paths including:

- A successful career in public history working for Federal or state agencies, in consulting, for non-profits and communities, and more. Our concentration in Cultural Resource Management & Historic Preservation is nationally renowned and has a high job placement rate.
- Advancing the careers and deepening the knowledge base of social studies and history teachers.
- Pursuing a Ph.D. in a field in which our faculty has expertise. We have a considerable concentration of established historians who study U.S. History, Public History, and Environmental History.

We offer three programs of study in which students can earn their M.A.:

- Write a thesis on Plan A.
- Earn your degree without a thesis on Plan B.
- Specialize in Cultural Resource Management & Historic Preservation.

Regardless of the program of study students select, they will work closely with one another and with the department's faculty mentors. Our department is committed to high-quality mentoring and to providing hands-on experience through internships, service-learning projects, and paid research positions at the Public Lands History Center. (<https://publiclands.colostate.edu/>) Although our curriculum is geographically based, the content of our graduate seminars explores themes of gender & sexuality, class, race & ethnicity, environment, and more. Students interested in graduate work should refer to the Graduate and Professional Bulletin (<http://catalog.colostate.edu/general-catalog/graduate-bulletin/>) and the Department of History (<https://history.colostate.edu/graduate/>) website.
